On the road to a carbon-neutral energy system in 2035, ambitious targets are set by the Dutch government for both energy production (3GW offshore solar and 21GW of offshore wind by 2030) as well as energy carriers such as hydrogen (4GW by 2030). Perhaps even more ambitious are the underlying policy frameworks.

We operate one of the Dutch North Sea's key hubs, the Greater Markham Area, which has been producing gas for more than 30 years. It includes the Markham, Chiswick, Grove and Kew fields. A key focus for our Netherlands team has been to introduce new technology and drill additional wells to maximise output from the region. View Assets

The Netherlands is using more and more energy and its gas reserves are running out. Among other things, the country will need to switch to alternative energy sources for transport and heating. Work on this must start now. The Netherlands also wants to achieve zero carbon (CO₂) emissions by 2050. So Dutch central government is taking steps to boost sustainable energy ...

Netherlands: Energy intensity: how much energy does it use per unit of GDP? Click to open interactive version. Energy is a large contributor to CO₂ - the burning of fossil fuels accounts for around three-quarters of global greenhouse gas emissions. So, reducing energy consumption can inevitably help to reduce emissions.

By 2050, the Netherlands wants to be using energy from sustainable sources only. There's a long way to go before this can happen. It will require new wind farms, electricity pylons, cables and other infrastructure. People, businesses and organisations will need to switch to smarter and more efficient ways of using energy.
