Birthplace of the sun and the Incan dynasty, Bolivia's Isla del Sol is the embodiment of peace and serenity. Best explored at an ambling pace, the sacred island reveals itself to be an energetic blend of mysticism and spirituality.

When I was in Bolivia, the sun set at around 6:30 pm, so it was sometimes difficult to completely avoid walking in the dark. However, I always stuck to the busier streets and did my best to avoid walking alone too late at ...

Isla del Sol was one of the highlights of my trip to Bolivia. It's absolutely magnificent and doesn't suffer anywhere near the amount of tourists as the Peruvian side of Lake Titicaca. The island has such a spiritual and peaceful feel to it.

Our first day in Bolivia was among my favorites so far on this epic journey through Peru and Bolivia. Our guide took us to Copacabana to our private boat for an ...
