

Fundamentally, CLOVER is an energy balance model which accounts for the generation and usage of electricity at an hourly resolution. The model is only as good as its data inputs and so the user should be aware of the many caveats that are attached to energy system modelling.

The quality of the panels and the workmanship is top-notch, and the system has already started to significantly reduce my energy bills. What I appreciated most was the clear communication throughout the project. Every step was explained to me, and the company made sure I understood how the system works and how to monitor my energy savings.
