In the spring of 2004 I published an article in Foreign Affairs magazine entitled Smart Power. In it I countered the idea that either "soft power" - U.S. cultural influence - or "hard power" - military might, could alone be the basis for a winning foreign policy strategy.

In the last months of 2020, Israel normalized its ties with four Arab countries. In the case of Morocco, the US issued a proclamation, recognizing Morocco's sovereignty over Western Sahara, making it the first country in the world to do so. What consequences such recognition will have on what is essentially a conflict in limbo is unclear.
